

Mr Dripping

Mark Rios

Barcelona, 1987

Mark Rios “MrDripping” is a renown artist who developed the painting technique of Dripping.

This technique was originally used by Jackson Pollock and it consisted of dropping lines of paint onto a canvas laid on the ground, creating floating, dancing, harmonious shapes. MrDripping was inspired by the idea of being able to paint without physically touching the canvas but decided to take Pollock’s method one step forward —

What do you do when you have a million ideas, but no time to do them? You dip your wand into paint and literally drip a masterpiece within a few minutes. How did you figure out this unique style of creating?

DRIP: My technique was inspired by a painter I strongly admire, Jackson Pollock. His abstract artwork inspired me to create my own unique style of dripping where I was able to drip something recognizable: bodies, faces and shapes. I developed my own style out of it that made me different. The technique itself is fast, but it took me years to be able to do what I do today.

What do you feel is the next step for progressing your art and developing more as an artist?

DRIP: I'm developing my dripping on new surfaces, different finishes, and mixing with diamonds, dust. I believe my dripping will end up being a new aesthetic for furniture, brand collaborations or walls.

Where do you find inspiration for the subjects you choose to drip?

DRIP: My inspiration comes from my background, which is fashion. I usually get inspired by photographs, models, music and architecture. All of those factors help in creating my dripping piece.

A lot of the work that we have seen of yours are human beings, predominantly female. Do you plan to switch up your subject choice in the future or have you found your sweet spot?

DRIP: If you look back in time, many artists used the human body as a reference because it's a beautiful way to communicate feelings. Dripping portraits allows me to show my emotions and beauty as well. Besides that, I am constantly expressing my artwork in other forms including abstract, objects, landscapes and much more depending on what a client would want for a piece.

Most artists at some point undergo the inevitable scrutiny from their parents. Was this the case for you or were they more supportive of your passion?

DRIP: They fully support me. I would have to say however, that of course all parents want stability for their children, and mine know that an artist's life is no guarantee. But, when you work hard at something you love or believe in, you will succeed. Therefore, I just focus on enjoying what I do and try to inspire the younger generation to do the same.

How would you describe/articulate your artwork to a blind person?

DRIP: I feel like blind people would have an interesting perception of what I create since my work dries with volume/texture. They could touch and feel every line and have their own perception of what it might be. In fact, I have actually been working on dripping pieces while blindfolded in hopes of bringing out what I envisioned in my head onto the canvas. I
